Shoalhaven Heads is a popular tourist destination on the South Coast of New South Wales. The Shack is located in the village just 200 metres from the beach, which is good for fishing and swimming. Swimming between the flags near the surf life saving club is recommended.

The council pool is about 400 metres from the SHACK and is excellent for small children; there is a hoist available at the pool for disabled people.

The river forms the southern boundary of the village and is good for boating, fishing and other water sports including sailboarding.

Seven Mile Beach National Park has wheelchair access and paths which make it a great place to walk through and take in the fresh air and beautiful scenery.
